WHAT A CURRENT ACCOUNT IS

The current account is a contract by which the bank performs a cash service for the customer: it keeps his/her savings and manages the money with a series of services (deposits, withdrawals and payments within the limits of the available balance).

The current account is a secure product. The main risk is the counterparty risk, i.e. the possibility that the bank may not be able to reimburse the current account holder, in whole or in part, the available balance. For this reason the bank subscribes to the Interbank Deposit Protection Fund, which guarantees each account holder coverage up to 100,000.00 euros.

In addition to this amount, there is the risk associated with the application of the "Bail-in", introduced by Directive 2014/59/EU and implemented in Italy with Legislative Decrees no. 180 and no. 181 of 16.11.2015, aimed at preventing and managing any crisis situations of banks.

The logics of the "Bail-in" establish in particular the hierarchy of the entities that will be involved in the rescue of a bank.

According to these rules, only after all resources of the riskiest category have been exhausted the next category is involved, according to this order:

- shareholders
- holders of other equity securities
- other subordinated creditors (including holders of subordinated bonds)
- creditors without collateral (e.g., pledge, mortgage) or personal guarantees (e.g., surety), including:
 - holders of unsubordinated and unsecured bonds
 - holders of certificates
 - customers who have derivatives with the bank, for any credit balance in their favour after the automatic termination of the derivative
 - holders of current accounts and other deposits for the amount exceeding 100,000 euros per depositor, other than the persons indicated in the following point
 - individuals, micro, small and medium-sized enterprises, holders of current accounts and other deposits for the amount exceeding 100,000 euros per depositor (the so-called depositor preference).

The current account is usually linked to other services such as debit card, credit card, checks, transfers, bill pay, overdraft.

For consumers with few transactions, the basic account may be indicated; ask for or get the relevant information sheet.
